

ABSTRACT

The objective of the this study is to identify the level of satisfaction of the consumers regarding houses built by private property developers.

There has been only a few books written on this subject and this study is based on information obtained from the property developers and occupants, during a short period of time.

A large number of complaints regarding the property developers and it is believed that this has arisen out of the dissatisfaction of the occupants.

Therefore, my objective from this study was to find out how for it is true.
